

INDUSTRIAL MARKET OVERVIEW

TY JANNEY, Managing Principal; ROBERT ELMER, Managing Principal

Boston's industrial market continued to soften in Q3 2024, with vacancy rates climbing to 7.0%. The market experienced negative net absorption, largely driven by a surge in new supply. Amazon's occupancy of 3.8M SF at Osgood Landing in North Andover in Q2 softened the otherwise negative absorption. Over the past year, demand has decreased by 1.4M SF. Industrial rent growth has slowed to 5.9%, and vacancy is projected to hit 7.5% by year end. Flex space demand has also weakened, particularly in biotech-centric areas, though rent growth is expected to stabilize by mid-2025. Despite these challenges, Boston's long-term outlook remains steady, with vacancy forecasted to level off around 7% by 2025.
